

I only listen to country music and I live in a part of NY that no longer has a country radio station. (not for about 2 yrs. now) So I chose to go to satellite radio and I pay for it. If regular radio cannot provide me with what I prefer to listen to then I should have that right to purchase what I prefer. I live in a household of 3 (ages 29, 47 and 56) and we all currently pay for satellite radio. Maybe regular radio should take the hint that there's nothing good to listen too and that people would rather pay for radio than listen for free. If we have choices for who our phone provider or TV provider or cell phone provider is then we should have a choice of who provides our radio.
